Handy With Her Gun

FRANK TURK SAYS HIS WIFE ORDERED HIM AWAY AND THEN BEGAN TO SHOOT.

Frank J. Turk claims that he was the victim of a petulant woman. He says that far from going on the mission of destruction as his wife claims, he went to her house this week on an errand of peace. He got a piece of lead in his right leg.

"I went to see her," said Turk this morning at the office of the Deputy High Sheriff's office "to talk some business with her. I didn't go for the purpose of doing her any harm or of even threatening to harm her. It was a matter of business that caused my going to her. I wanted to talk with her about some matters. She came to the door. I did not even get into the house. She ordered me away, turned and stepped inside the house and grabbed the revolver, came out and began to shoot. When she ordered me away I began to back off the porch. She came out immediately and took four shots at me as I was standing on the ground. One of the bullets entered the right leg and grazed the bone. The doctor had not extracted the bullet but will put the X ray on the wound this afternoon and try to remove the bullet.

"I am going to see the Deputy today and decide what is to be done in this matter. I am going to prosecute my wife but what the charge will be I do not know until after I have consulted with Mr. Chillingworth. No, I did not draw a revolver on my wife."

MR. DOOLEY ON ELIJAH II

"Dowie's a good wan," said Hennessey, "but I don't believe he's Lijah."

"He's not," said Mr. Dooley, "an' he is. Lijah's wan iv his names, an' he has a right to a nonadayploom, just th' same as other men iv note, writers iv romance an' gentlemen with raycords. Whin ye put ye're fut on th' bottom step iv th' ladder iv fame, ye can choose an-ny name ye want. Ye'd have no chanst as Hinnissey. But if ye could get tin or twenty lads to sav ye was Brine Boroo, an' fifty others to throw bricks at ye an' say ye were only a poor specimin iv th' Hinnissey family, ye'r forchoon would be made. An' ye could be Boroo with modern improvements."

"I'm Lijah," says Dowie, "an' here to make up fr th' lost opporchoonities iv me las' trip to earth. Instid iv askin' ravens fr bread," he says, "I'll throuble th' waiter fr a squab. I mind th' time," he says, "whin fr days I hadn't a cint to tip th' ravens. Pass th' patty an' lave me hand th' waiter some iv th' Lord's money, fr'm Zine. 'Tis better to give than to rayceive," he says, "if ye rayceive enough first. Ye mind what Zine is? 'Tis me home. Many enter but few lave, fr after entering they sildom have th' price. 'Twas a proffy that I would come, an' that proves I'm here. I'm come to precede th' millenium, which ye'll distinguish fr'm me own times be th' contrast. Sind fr me carriage. Me legs have been tired fr sival thousand years, as a raysult iv walkin' th' las' time, before I knew I was too good fr it."

"'Tis a changed Lijah," said Hennessey.

"'Tis so," said Mr. Dooley. "An' if I was th' las' Lijah an' was coming back I'd want a change meself."

SALARIES PAID IN CASH

A LINE OF CAMBODIANS AT THE TREASURY AND ALL ARE ACCOMMODATED WITH COIN.

Today was government pay day, being the last legal day of the month, and the treasury paid cash. There was a long line of government employees at the treasury when it opened at nine o'clock. Like the Cambodians in Wang, they were all reaching for coin but unlike the Cambodians, they all got it. There was doubt in the minds of many as to whether the government would have money enough to pay them or would have to register warrants. The line included teachers, sanitary inspectors, pilots, doctors and employees of all departments. All were accommodated with the amount due them. Warrants for other purposes have been registered, but enough cash has been kept on hand for salaries, and the government will try to keep enough cash ever ymonth for the pay rolls, leaving other warrants to wait.
